Other information

Working in a School Setting Duty of Care

The legal duty of care requires that all staff should take all reasonable measures to ensure the safety of any student. Whilst Administrative Service Officers (ASO) do not have the same level of duty of care as teachers, because of the student/teacher relationship that exists and teachers' professional standing, all staff are required to take reasonable steps to protect students against risks of injury that could have reasonably been foreseen.

The duty is not to ensure that there is no injury but to take reasonable care to prevent injury that could have reasonably been foreseen. The level of duty of care for ASO staff will depend on the individual role and the arrangements put in place by the principal.

All ASO staff are responsible for providing basic physical and emotional care for students. This may include activities such as toileting, assisting with meals and lifting of students and/or the provision of support to students in accordance with approved student health care/treatment plans. The degree of responsibility for these activities will vary depending on the role, individual student needs and the working environment.

Employment conditions

A full-time Administrative Service Officer's ordinary hours of work are 147 hours over a four week period (ie. an average of 73 hours 30 minutes per fortnight or 36 hours 45 minutes per week).

Administrative Service Officers usually work 7 hours 21 minutes per day with an additional 60 minutes for a lunch break.

Administrative Service Officers in schools are required to work during school stand down periods (school holidays), noting that flexible working conditions may apply on an individual basis.

Extracurricular activities

Administrative Service Officers in schools may be required to assist teachers with the care and supervision of students in out-of-class activities including on school excursions, overnight camps and when transporting students to other campuses or facilities.

These school activities may be in addition to their ordinary hours of work. In these circumstances, participation is voluntary and following agreement with the principal, Administrative Service Officers may be granted flex or overtime in accordance with the enterprise agreement.

The degree of responsibility for these activities will vary dependant on the Administrative Service Officer, student needs and environment.

Mandatory reporting requirements

Administrative Service Officers in schools also have an additional responsibility for the care and protection of students. The Children's and Young People Act 2008 (the Act) identifies certain persons, including teachers and public servants who in the course of their employment works with or provides services to children and young people, as mandatory reporters.

A mandatory reporter must notify Care and Protection Services when they believe, on reasonable grounds, that a child or young person has experienced, or is experiencing, sexual abuse and/or non-accidental physical injury.

Reportable conduct

The ACT Reportable Conduct Scheme is an employment based child protection measure designed to ensure that allegations and convictions against employees, related to abuse and misconduct against children, are identified and acted on appropriately. The Scheme was developed in response to the Royal Commission into Institutional Responses into Child Sexual Abuse and mirrors the NSW system, which has proven to be an effective and successful model.

The ACT Education Directorate is considered a 'designated entity' under the scheme and as such is required to report allegations, offences or convictions relating to child abuse or child-related misconduct by an employee, to the ACT Ombudsman. For the purposes of the scheme, a child is classified as a person under 18 years old.
